TUESDAY MORNING......MAY 9, 1876 A DEMOCRATIC petition was presented in the House yesterday for a new form of government in this District. The signers represented $6,000,000 only of the $93,-452,684 of the taxable property in the District.

ELSEWHERE will be found the text of the dispatch of Secretary Fish upon the Extradition treaty. It is able, frank, truthful and dignified. It concludes a history of extradition under the treaty of 1842, with a demand for the release of Winslow couched in the exact terms of the treaty and prohibiting the assurance of any new guarantees whatever. As we have already had occasion to remark, it appears to us that the course of the British Government in this matter has been designedly and studiously offensive. Common civility should have taught the British Cabinet the propriety of notifying our Government of its dissatisfaction with the terms of the treaty and of opening negotis ions for a new one before insolently demanding as a right under a law of Parliament what for thirty years antecedent it had never thought of exacting as a compliance with the provisions of the treaty It would have been much more in conformity with friendly diplomatic usage if the provisions of the treaty had been terminated by the simple formal notice of discontinuance provided for in its terms. and would have left a better feeling prevailing between the two nations.

Among those mentioned as originators of the new club of "Republican Reformers," lately organized in New York, appears the name of a somewhat prominent individual. An examination of the rolls in the proper office shows that the name of this same gentleman can be found as "consulting engineer," in connection with some work under the control of the Chief of Engineers. This able officer has doubt. less been imposed upon. It is stated that for five or six years this so-called "consulting engineer" has proven himself to be a mode reformer by drawing his pay, at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum or more, with perfect regularity, and it is further stated that the time consumed by him in the duties of this position would not amount in all to sixty days per angum. If the receipt of large pay, promptly drawn for little work, was one of the "principles of the founders of our Government," on which this club is said to be based, the organization may not commend itself to the people. An examination of the vouchers in the proper offices may probably determine that one of the sheep in that flock is

"THIS CENTENNIAL YEAR."

It has become so common, not to say fashionable to offer "this Centennial year" as an excuse for taking a new departure in anything or any line of policy, or for inaugurating a reform of any sort, that it appears almost useless to attempt to frame an argument, or relate a narrative, or record a new resolution, or divine a motive, or marry a wife, or commence a law suit, or criticise a member of Congress, or puff a new doorkeeper, or note the effects of a hurricane, or comment upon a sudden change in the weather, or announce the depression in the stock market consonant with the failure of a Daniel Drew or the illness of a Cornelius Vanderbilt, or to defame a Presidential aspirant, without an allusion to the extreme appositeness of the time to the occasion, and the date to the event, on "this Centennial year."

We can recall, just now, but one sensational malady which has become purely and thoroughly epidemic the country through that has not been proclaimed far and near as pre-eminently fitting to "this Centennial year." And for the credit of the human species and to the honor of the American press be it proclaimed that the present alanderous crusade upon public men in the shape of "Paul Pry" investigations is not prosecuted in the hope of glerifying and honoring the name of the democratic institutions of this great American Republic in "this Centennial year." Although the Detective Press is fairly amenable to the homely adage, "'Tis a dirty bird that fouls its own nest," for the shameless manner in which it has proclaimed to all the world the virtual failure of our form of government, by its wholesale slanders of the President and his Cabinet, and political friends who aid in the administration of the laws, yet, the tacit disavowal of belief in its own tales which is conveyed in the invitation it extends to all the world to come and join us in our of celebration the completion of our first century of wonderful and unparalleled progress in useful inventions, in the arts and sciences, in popular education, in the development of our material resources, through the intervention of labor-saving machinery, and in all that goes to evince the true greatness of mankind in the family of nations, disarms its venomous shaf a of half their poisonous effect among intelligent readers "his Centennial year." Almost ever since the inception of the Centennial celetion the sensational Opposition or Detective Press has devoted its best efforts to the slanderous abuse of the President and his administration. By its conduct, if not in plain words, then by implication and insinuation and innuendo, it has been accusing the President and his advisers of the highest crimes and misdemeanors known to the law. It has improved every possible opportunity to besmirch their names, both politically and morally, by the publication and circulation of stories, of which, if but the tenth part were true, would proclaim this republican Government of ours the worst the world ever saw, and the President and his advisers only fit to occupy prominent places in the penitentiary. It has spared no pains to spread far and wide the most exaggerated rumors of corruption and malfeasance in office, which were derived from disappointed and irresponsible office or contract seekers or brokers whose word would not convict a negro thief in a Southern police court. And all this has been done with such shameless persistency as to begin to make some impression upon the minds of the credulous, as continual droppings will vear." Foreign Ministers accredited to this Government have again and again felt obliged to meet these slanders of our own Government and write home warning their countrymen that they must not believe anything they ee in our political newspapers of a sensational import during a political campaign. They have felt compelled to explain that they did not feel dishonored and degraded by their official relations with the Government and social relations with the families of the Government dignitaries in "this Centennial year." In doing this they have explained that this is the year for the Presidential election, involving a possible political revolution; that our way of contesting these revolutionary elections is with loud words, false accusations, unlimited slander and the silent ballot -and this we call self-government. They have assured their people that there is no danger of a war; that they may safely come to the Exposition regardless of the newspaper fan faronade; that the lion and the lamb are to lie down together "this Centennial year." and that the ex-Confederates and the ex-Union soldiers have "buried the hatchet," and agreed to fight no more except side by side for the Stars and Stripes from "this Centennial year" henceforward; that the President is really a respectable gentleman who is conscientiously striving to perform his difficult duties; who, secure and serene in conscious innocence and rectitude, can afford to smile at the vipers who gnaw at his reputation as they would at a file, and that his Cabinet are equally invulnerable to the arts of these maligners. As a fitting reply to the slanders, charging corruption and malfessance, these foreign ministers have simply directed the attention of their Governments to a few official figures from Reports on the Finances, which settle the

Lee at Appomattox, when Grant refused a triumphal entry into Richmond, the conquered capital, at the head of his victorious army, but hurried to Washington to countermand orders for supplies and cancel contracts for munitions and order the sale of perishable property no longer needed, in order to lighten the burdens of the people by the gradual reduction of taxes, there has not been a day nor an hour in which, either as General of the Army or as President, General Grant has not labored successfully in the same direction down even to "this Centennial year." These foreign representatives may and do point with confidence to his reduction of the army, to his appreciation of the public credit by a constant reduction of the public debt, and to his reduction of the taxes, both internal and external, at the same time, thereby lightening the burdens of the people. They deduce from these results also a large annual decrease of the public expenditures, at the same time that the natural growth and development of the country have a tendency to augment those expenses. They have further pointed to the never-to-be-forgotten fact that the same Republican party which maintained the integrity of the Government by force of arms, and afterwards placed Grant at the head of it and sustained him there, has handled, during its fifteen years of rule, more than five times the amount of revenue received and disbursed by all of its predecessors since the foundation of the Government. But while it has done this, and has done it in the face of all the demoralizing effects and influences of a long civil war, it is able, in the midst of the full tide of slander now assailing it, to point to the fact that its losses through corruption, malfeasance and defalcations are less than one tenth, in ratio to the amounts handled, as great as those of its predecessors. These facts settle the question in the minds of all sensible and honorable men of cool reflection and calm judgment. Divested of partisan hate and the heat of political passion, and viewed in the light of statistical history, the career of the Republican party in this country is a grand one, of which each individual member may well be proud in "this Centennial

EDITORIAL POSTSCRIPT.

One of the saddest things to contemplate just now is the large number of persons in this country who have no relations in Phila-

The Democratic party in Indiana have, with one accord and with malice aforethought, sat down on Congressman Springer. They claim that in his attempt to injure Morton he has stirred up the old war issues in the State, thereby settling the defeat of Blue Jeans Williams by a large majority.

Detectives are on the trail of Tweed. They tracked the prince of six millions to the Muskoka river. Canada, but he being warned of their approach fied to a small steamer and made good his escape. The story is a very neatly-constructed affair, and, should it prove true, the probabilities are that Boss Tweed will be in custody before the week has closed.

Dr. F. M. Stringfield, formerly of this city, is announced by the Topeka (Kansas) Daily Blade, as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor of that State on the Democratic ticket. The Doctor was a pretty clever fellow here, but he will hardly reach the office of Lieutenant Governor on that ticket. It is re served for the Republican nominee.

Biggerman Fitzhugh was on his high horse vesterday. When Dom Pedro visited the Capitol he was on the alert. He was watching enxiously for the approach of his Imperial Majesty. When the Emperor entered the diplomatic gallery of the House, Fitzhugh, the bigger man, was the first to notice his appearance. Away he sped, hurrying to grasp the hand of royalty. When he grasped it, however, he did not realize as much on the in vestment as he expected, for the Emperor simply smiled, and seemed to say to himself. you had better go out and buck the place where your sense ought to be against something solid." Whenever the old Roman augurs attempted to palm off their mythical nonsense on the ignorant masses of yore, they invariably miled in their sleeves, and so it is at presen with the Democratic leaders. They thrust their heads out of the committee-rooms at the Capitol and shout, "Reform!" and then disappear to chuckle over their ridiculous sortic. The idea that the party which furnished the country such men as Floyd and Thompson should attempt to carry the standard of Reform is simply preposterous. It reminds us of the couplet which runs: "When the devil was sick,

The devil a monk would be;
But when the devil was well;
The devil a monk was he."
